

“Mod Squad” Returns

“Mod Squad” returns to ABC this fall for a second season of “telling it like it is” through three kids from varied troubled backgrounds. Michael Cole, Clarence Williams III and Peggy Lipton continue their roles as Pete Cochran, Lind Hayes and Julie Barnes, three young people helping the police to expose adult criminals who exploit kids.

Clarence Williams III (left) was born in New York City and originally intended to be a cook. After being fascinated with a play given at a YMCA, he made his way to Broadway, did stage plays, and later became a protege of Bill Cosby.

Michael Cole, son of a Wisconsin electronics salesman, left his home state early and worked at many jobs before settling in Los Angeles and enrolling in an acting workshop. After much study, he began appearances in several TV series.

Peggy Lipton, a former child model, made her first TV appearance in “Bewitched” and went from there to roles in many TV series.
